

What's happening in the news
this week?

Let's have a look at this week's poster! What can you see?

Let's have a look at this week's poster!

Do you think people should live a more natural life?

So, what's been happening in the news this week...

The people in the poster are called the Munduruku people. They live in the Amazon rainforest, and have come to tell our world leaders that people should listen to them about how we can protect the Amazon rainforest. The Munduruku people are worried about the rainforest, where they live, because lots of trees have been cut down and parts of the forest have been destroyed.

Why do you think the Mundurucu people are worried about trees being chopped down?

So, what's been happening in the news this week...

So the Munduruku people came together at COP26 earlier this month to share their message, that the world needs their expertise in protecting the Amazon rainforest.

Would you like to live in the Amazon rainforest?

This week's Virtual Assembly here.

Assembly Resource

Why do you think the Munduruku people made the very long journey to Glasgow?

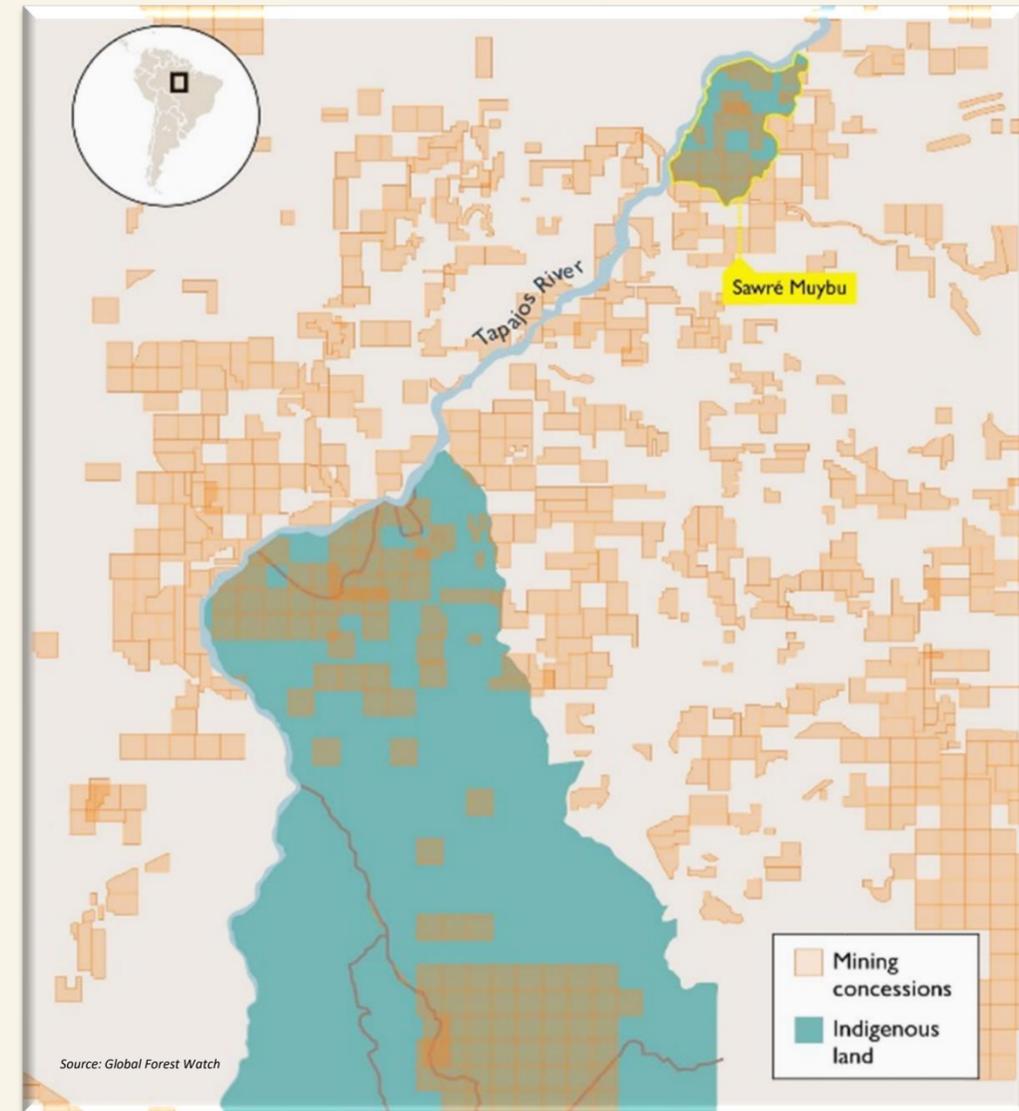

Do you think more should be done to protect their way of life?

Who are the Munduruku?

There are about 900,000 people who live in the Amazon rainforest. The Munduruku are one group that live there.

They make their money by collecting latex from wild rubber trees and exchanging it for goods. They still farm, hunt and fish on the land they inhabit.

The Munduruku came together at COP26 earlier this month to share their message, that the world needs their expertise in protecting the Amazon rainforest – their home. Their way of life is being threatened, with huge areas of forest being destroyed by gold miners and loggers who are illegally working the land. The price of gold soared during the first year of the pandemic, which led to more illegal mines.

Pictured above: Illegal mining areas in and around Munduruku land

Source: Beka Munduruku

Pictured above: Beka Munduruku wants the world to protect the rainforest that is her home.

“People of the world, come and help us protect nature and fight the projects that wants to destroy the forest,” Beka Munduruku (pictured above) said at a meeting of indigenous leaders. She spoke, among other issues, of how she used to play in the nearby river but now mercury from illegal mining poisons the water.

The above photograph taken in April, shows an illegal gold mine in the Uraricoerca river region. Forest has been cut down and replaced with pools of stagnant water and felled trees.

Source: Christian Braga/Greenpeace

How does it make me feel?

sad	angry	happy	confused	excited	worried	shocked	afraid
despondent disconsolate dismal doleful downhearted forlorn gloomy melancholic miserable woeful wretched	aggrieved annoyed discontented disgruntled distressed exasperated frustrated indignant offended outraged resentful vexed	beaming buoyant cheery contented delighted enraptured gleeful glowing joyful	addled baffled bemused bewildered disorientated indistinct muddled mystified perplexed puzzled	animated elevated enlivened enthusiastic exhilarated exuberant thrilled	agitated anxious apprehensive concerned disquieted distraught distressed disturbed fretful perturbed troubled uneasy	astonished astounded disconcerted distressed dumbfounded horrified staggered startled stunned surprised	alarmed apprehensive daunted fearful frantic horrified petrified terrified

What do you think might be similarities and differences between your life and the life of the Munduruku people?

On the next slide there are photos of varied ways of living.

Amish and Munuruku – living simpler lives.

Modern life – technology, supermarkets, sport and transport etc.

Beliefs - Having varied faiths and beliefs

We are all human beings of the world and should be respected.

We all have the right to be ourselves - to use our own language, live in our own way (culture) and believe in our own faith or religion, even if it is not shared by most people in the country where we live, as long as it is not harmful to others.

Reflection

All of our lives are different. From the food we eat, to the technology we use and the homes we live in. Although there is no correct way to live, we must always remember that our actions and choices affect others and the world around us.

We should respect each other.

This week's British Value

British Values

Mutual Respect

The Munduruku are indigenous people, who live in parts of Brazil. Their life is different from ours but we understand and respect that.

UN Rights of a Child

All children have the right to use their own language, culture and religion, even if it is not shared by most people in the country where they live.

Celebration Assembly

 You are all global citizens – Let's celebrate the wonder of you.

-  Class Awards
-  Headteacher Awards
- Values Awards – 4Cs

